Year 4 SHELTERBOX TRIP – written by Daisy and Lucy

On Wednesday, we went to Shelter Box disaster relief trip in Truro.

They explained why and how they helped people in natural disasters and manmade disaster. Two girls called Steph and Sarah did an activity with us where you had a piece of card with something that you either wanted or needed, it was quite tricky. Our group had rubbish collection which we decided wasn't needed and clean fresh water which was decided we definitely needed to survive.

After we split into two groups we went to look at the different types of tent they would send for different disasters. The summer tent had a mosquito net so people don't get a bad disease called malaria. It is very bad and it could lead to children getting very ill and cause death. We also found out about the manmade disaster, like war and how they didn't send tools because they could use them to fight. Then we had to split up into three groups and we all were given a picture of a disaster and we had to guess what disaster it was and what supplies to give them.

Finally, we had to pack a box for a disaster but it was a pretend one of course. As we only had a polystyrene tent, we were all told to pack for a certain climate. It was very hard as we all made lots of mistakes, for example, putting two of the same thing or not putting in something that could save their life.

Altogether I really enjoyed the trip and thought it was a good experience. I would recommend coming again with family and friends. It's really nice to know that someone is always there when a disaster happens to help you get through it.

Internet Safety- Online gaming

Online gaming is hugely popular with children and young people. Annual research conducted by OFCOM shows that gaming is still one of the top activities enjoyed by 5-16 year olds online, with many of them gaming via mobile devices and going online using their games console.

From sport related games to mission based games and quests inspiring users to complete challenges, interactive games cater for a wide range of interests, and can enable users to link up and play together.

Most games now have an online element to them; allowing users to take part in leader boards, join group games or chat to others. Internet connectivity in a game adds a new opportunity for gamers as it allows players to find and play against, or with, other players. These may be their friends or family members or even other users in the game from around the world (in a multi-player game).

We know that parents and carers do have questions and concerns about games, often about the type of games their child plays, who they may be speaking to and for how much time their child is playing. One of our biggest concerns is children playing games which are not age appropriate. We have attached a leaflet to this weeks newsletter which provides an introduction to online gaming and advice for parents specifically related to gaming.
